Vidocq Society founders to attend annual RSA conference

Philadelphia – Vidocq Society founders William L. Fleisher, director, Keystone Intelligence Network and Richard Walter, forensic psychologist, along with Michael Capuzzo, New York Times best-selling author of The Murder Room will join with global security experts from around the world including President William J. Clinton and Judge Michael Chertoff, former US Secretary of Homeland Security, at the 20th annual RSA Conference at the Moscone Center in San Francisco from Tuesday, 2-15 to Friday, 2-18-2011.

The RSA Conference is one of the most prestigious information security events of the year. It brings together IT professionals, developers, policy makers, industry leaders and academics who share information and exchange ideas on technology trends and the best practices in identity theft, hacking, cyber-terrorism, biometrics, network forensics, perimeter defense, secure web services, encryption and related topics. Never in our history has these concerns been more relevant as the information security field continues to grow in importance and influence in public and private industry.

Fleisher & Walter will join with keynote Capuzzo who will moderate a discussion on breaking the coldest cases: Wednesday, 2-16-2011, 4:40 p.m., at Moscone north hall D. They will discuss the inner workings of The Vidocq Society and set an inspiring example to the RSA conference community.
